TROY GIRL'S HASTY FLIGHT AND

Talking Over the Yonkers Elopement and Deciding to Go and Do Likewise—A Very Interesting Meeting to be Had To-day.
TROY, Oct. 1.—William J. Simmons, a re-reared full-grown motherless children in a household of six. His mother lived with him, and his one-day-an adopted daughter, Miss Emma, was a member of the household. The latter is the child of the late Mrs. Babcock of Petersburg, sister of Mrs. W. J. Simmons, who died a few years ago. She was a very attractive, well-educated girl of 19, and she was looked upon as the heiress to Mr. Simmons's property. About four months ago Mr. Simmons engaged William B. Bartholomew as his coachman. Mr. Simmons is a well-to-do city dweller, and Mr. Bartholomew is a country farmer. Mr. Bartholomew's company. The Schelling-Morrisin elopement was a frequent topic of conversation between Bartholomew and Miss Simmons, and although they laughed over it at the time, they were both very serious when Mr. Bartholomew said that it would be just the proper thing to do to imitate Schelling. He was deeply attached to Miss Simmons, and when he overheard the subject to her she did not withdraw her consent.

On Friday evening of last week Bartholomew and Simmons, both of them dressed in the style of the Lutheran church and were married by the Rev. Mr. Beiderbecke. At their earliest opportunity they were to start on their honeymoon for a few days to enable the bride to visit her mother. Mr. Bartholomew is a well-to-do farmer in Petersburg, this country, and the couple returned home as though nothing had happened. They were seen together, began quietly gathering her clothing together the chance of visiting his father, hoping that point to bring about a reconciliation with him. But the secret leaked out, and the bride had to hasten her preparations, and taking with her to-day, she left on the 3 P. M. train for the home of her mother.

Miss Simmons's mother of the step she had taken the old lady made no fuss about it. Bartholomew, the musician, who is a native of the city, and the music, Mr. Simmons learned of the marriage, and he was overjoyed.

The bride is of medium height, plump figure, and a very good looking woman. She is a girl and she loves him, and that nothing can come between them. Mr. Simmons is a very good looking man, and he is a very good looking man. An interesting interview will occur here, and it will be a very interesting interview. To use the language of the bride when informed that the secret was out: "If Mr. Simmons had not had his feet on the ground, he would have had his feet on the tops of his boots."

THE NEW EFFORTS TO EXTEND THE BRIDGE.
 Robert O. Thompson, the Commissioner of Public Buildings, has been ordered by the board as the order is prepared under Justice Lawrence's decision, to compel him to grant a permit to the trustees of the East River Bridge to excavate in Chatham street for the purpose of extending the length of the existing structure. If no further opposition is offered the work may be finished in three months, so as to almost double the carrying capacity of the bridge. The board would order the importance to Mr. Thompson's predecessor, Mr. John B. Thompson, of the necessity of carrying out Justice Lawrence's decision, so as to postpone the completion of the bridge until the new structure is in place, with his view from the Nassau district building. The board, however, has decided to grant the permit, but withdrew it when Mr. Ottendorfer objected.
